AMR CHAIRMAN DON CARTY COMMENDS EMPLOYEES FOR RATIFYING
CONSENSUAL AGREEMENTS TO CUT COSTS

FORT WORTH, Texas - AMR Chairman Don Carty today expressed his gratitude to the employees of American Airlines and their union leadership for ratifying ground-breaking agreements to achieve $1.8 billion in annual employee cost savings.

American's unionized employee groups rallied to ratify consensual agreements reached just two weeks ago with the Allied Pilots Association, the Association of Professional Flight Attendants and the Transport Workers Union.

"This development is unprecedented in the history of the U.S. airline industry," Carty said, heralding ratification votes to approve the restructured contracts, "and I am enormously proud of our employees."

"These votes clearly demonstrate our employees' dedication and commitment to creating a secure future for American Airlines and its people," he added.

Carty also thanked union leaders for agreeing to accelerate the ratification process from the standard 30 days to two weeks, and credited all three unions for working together to overcome last-minute issues with the APFA's balloting process and urging the extension of voting for flight attendants.

"This has been a race against the clock," Carty said, "My thanks go to the union leadership and to all our employees who recognized the urgency of our financial crisis and rose to meet the challenge."

Commenting on the fact that the company had made millions of dollars in loan repayments to allow the extension, Carty said American's employees had proved that the risk was worth taking.

"I'll bank on the employees of American Airlines any day," Carty said. "I believed it was important to make an investment in the future of this company, just as our employees have made a significant investment themselves. Today I have even more confidence that, by continuing to work together, we can make our investment pay off."

Carty and AMR President and COO Gerard Arpey said ratification of the labor agreements is a significant step toward helping the company in its efforts to restructure costs on its own. In addition, the company continues its work to secure accommodations from its lenders and suppliers.

"Today was an important step in our ability to transition to the 21st century as a new airline in a new era. With the help of our employees " our greatest asset" we will take on the competition, and work together to succeed," Carty and Arpey said.

But the company cautioned that even with ratification of the agreements, American's financial condition is weak and its prospects remain uncertain. Carty warned that the company is not yet "out of the woods," and "that given the hostile financial and business environment we find ourselves in and its inherent risks the success of our efforts is not assured."

The accords with the three unions are far reaching and touch on nearly every aspect of pay, benefits and work rules.

The company has also announced changes to pay, benefits and work rules for all non-union employees, including agents, representatives, planners, support staff and management.

The cost savings were divided by work group as follows:

- Pilots: $660 million
- Flight attendants: $340 million
- TWU Represented employees: $620 million
- Agents, representatives and planners: $80 million
- Management and support staff: $100 million

Carty, who said the restructuring effort is based on a model of "shared sacrifice," took a 33 percent base pay cut, declined a bonus for the third consecutive year, and participated in other changes that significantly reduced the value of compensation for senior officers.

"These are difficult times for the company and our people," Carty said, "Rest assured that I would not ask for these sacrifices if I weren't convinced that they were absolutely necessary. The company recently announced a new profit sharing and stock option program that will allow employees to benefit from the company's eventual recovery.

"Working together, we have made hard choices, but they are choices that are ultimately in the best interest of American Airlines and its employees," Carty said.
