Contested Insurance Claims

As previously disclosed, the Company incurred storm-related damages resulting from Hurricanes Katrina and Rita in 2005, including significant damage to certain offshore oil and gas properties of its Maritech Resources, Inc. subsidiary. While the Company has received substantial insurance claim payments approaching $90 million for the 2005 storm damages, the Company's insurers have questioned coverage for certain of these claims and requested additional information. The Company has provided the requested information, has continued its dialogue with the insurers, and remains confident that its claims are valid; however, the insurers' continuing delays have raised doubts about their willingness to pay the remaining claims, both for work performed and previously included in insurance receivable as well as for future work to be performed and included in the Company's calculation of its asset retirement obligation related to the damaged properties. In addition, in late 2007, the Company filed a lawsuit against the insurers regarding the contested insurance claims.

After determining that the amount and timing of further payments by the insurance providers is indeterminable, on January 11, 2008, management of the Company estimated that the Company will incur a fourth quarter 2007 charge to pretax earnings of approximately $25 million for the write-off of certain insurance receivables. In addition, the Company will increase its asset retirement obligation by approximately $43 million, approximately $40 million of which will be charged to fourth quarter 2007 pretax earnings as an impairment of the associated oil and gas properties, based on year-end reserve estimates. The final amount of such charges to pretax earnings will be determined following the normal year-end closing process, including the completion of the Company's internal financial review, reserves analysis, and independent audit. The charges to pretax earnings related to the uncollected insurance receivables will not result in any future cash expenditures by the Company. The charge to pretax earnings resulting from the increase in the related asset retirement obligation relates to certain well intervention and debris removal costs to be incurred in the future. To the extent the Company is not reimbursed for these costs to be incurred in future periods, this will result in future cash expenditures by the Company, but not additional charges to earnings.

Oil and Gas Properties

On January 11, 2008, management of the Company determined that the carrying amounts of certain offshore oil and gas properties of its Maritech subsidiary were no longer fully realizable pursuant to expected future cash flows of the associated oil and gas reserves. Such conclusion was made following recent property acquisitions by Maritech, recent production history, the adjustment of Maritech's future drilling and development plans, and year-end reserve estimates. The Company estimates that the impact of these impairment charges to fourth quarter 2007 earnings will range from approximately $10 to $15 million. It is not anticipated that the impairment will result in future cash expenditures. The final amount of such impairment charge to earnings will be determined following the normal year-end closing process, including the completion of the Company's internal financial review, reserves analysis, and independent audit.
