City National To Be Acquired By
Royal Bank of Canada
Key Messages/Talking Points

On January 22, 2015, City National Corporation and Royal Bank of Canada (RBC) announced plans to merge. RBC has agreed to acquire City National for a combination of cash and stock. The agreement provides a unique opportunity to leverage City National's high-touch private and business banking platform with RBC's U.S. Wealth Management unit to better serve clients. RBC is the largest bank in Canada and one of the world's leading financial institutions.

"This combination is a compelling opportunity. It will deliver significant value to shareholders along with the opportunity to participate in the growth of RBC, which has outperformed its peers and broader market indices over the past 10 years. It will promote both continuity and growth, enabling our outstanding team of colleagues to maintain and even strengthen City National's value proposition. It will enhance what we can do for our clients and the communities we serve."

Russell Goldsmith
Chairman and CEO
City National Corporation

"In line with RBC's strategic goals, we believe this combination creates a powerful expansion platform for focused long-term growth in the country which we view as our second home market. City National serves high-net-worth and commercial client segments in select high-growth markets, and represents a unique opportunity to complement and enhance our existing U.S. businesses and product offering."

Dave McKay
President and CEO
Royal Bank of Canada

Good for City National's Clients and the Communities It Serves

RBC is a premier financial services company that is renowned for strength and stability. With a market capitalization of almost $90 billion (USD), it is the largest financial institution in Canada, the 5th largest in North America and the 12th largest in the world (as of December 31, 2014).

Ø The company has assets of $941 billion (CAD) and operates approximately 1,400 offices with 78,000 colleagues in 40 countries.

Ø RBC is one of the highest rated banks in the world: Moody's (Aa3), S&P (AA-1), Fitch (AA), DBRS (AA).

Ø RBC's U.S. Wealth Management unit administers approximately $260 billion (USD) in assets for approximately 340,000 households in the United States.

Ø RBC Capital Markets provides a full suite of products and services to a broad range of industries. RBC Capital Markets is a top 10 investment bank globally.

The merger will benefit City National's clients and communities. With additional resources from RBC, City National will be able to further strengthen its capabilities, products, and lending capacity while also further enhancing its safety and soundness.

Good for City National Colleagues

The combination of these two companies is about continuity and growth, not cost-savings. We do not expect significant job reductions as a result of this acquisition and will continue to add and replace staff as appropriate.

· Joining forces with RBC will provide continuity and consistency.

City National's management team is expected to remain in place. Russell Goldsmith will continue to serve as Chairman and CEO of City National, and he also will be responsible for RBC's U.S. Wealth Management unit. Chris Warmuth will remain president of City National.

Ø The bank will remain headquartered in Los Angeles and, as a U.S. bank, will be regulated by the OCC and the Federal Reserve, just as it is today.

Ø For now, City National will continue to operate under its current brand. Over time, the company will work with RBC to leverage its brand strength where it makes sense.

Ø City National will continue its long-standing client strategy and value proposition as America's Premier Private and Business Bank®, and with support from RBC, will grow in its current markets and in selected new ones over time.

Compelling Value for City National Shareholders

The acquisition provides compelling value for City National shareholders -- both in the form of cash and as an opportunity to participate as stockholders of RBC.

Ø City National shareholders will receive $5.4 billion, or approximately $93.80 per share.

Ø The purchase price represents a premium of approximately 26 percent to City National's closing share price of $74.57 on January 21, 2015.

Ø City National shareholders also will receive substantially higher dividend payments. RBC's dividend yield is approximately 4.0 percent (as of January 20, 2015), compared with City National's yield of 1.7 percent.

A Great Fit and a Unique Opportunity

This is a great fit. Both City National and RBC are strong and stable, and both of them have succeeded largely by virtue of their focus, capabilities, diversification, client service, and the caliber of their people.

RBC approached City National last summer. The Toronto-based company presented a strategic vision to build North America's premier private and business bank – a vision that would benefit greatly from the purchase of a U.S. institution like City National that has a highly successful private and business bank as well as a compatible wealth management business.

Business as Usual for Now

The combination of City National and RBC is expected to be completed before the end of calendar 2015. Until then, all City National colleagues and clients should continue to conduct business just as they do now.
