26 January 2004

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Today the company I direct made a public offer to the shareholders of Aventis. I wish to inform you personally in view of the importance of this project.

Our aim is to combine with Aventis to create a large global group, a European leader and a business which is well placed to meet the challenges of the future. This group will benefit from a remarkable portfolio of products, as well as a new robustness which the pooling of our respective resources will give us, particularly in the field of R&D.

We will then be equipped to successfully undertake a powerful project which meets our objectives, namely to offer patients a growing number of innovative drugs, to better respond to the constraints of our sector and ensure a solid, profitable and long-term growth serving to improve life.

The rationale for this project is not cost cutting or focusing on R&D and production, but rather the wish to expand, harness our skills and fulfill our potential.

We are inviting you to take part in an exciting project for the future in which you can invest your savoir-faire and enthusiasm. It is now that we need to seize the moment and create this number 1 in Europe, number 3 world-wide in pharmacy.

This project marks a great step forward in the history of our group which has been achieved by pointing all our stakeholders towards the overriding goal of research and by engaging in a real dialogue with employees. We have demonstrated our ability to succeed during our last merger, all the while respecting the cultures of each and every person. By valuing the complementarity of each we were able to build a brilliant future for health and our new company.

Let me assure you that it is with the above in mind that we will carry out this project and that we will keep you informed each step of the way.

I would like to thank you in advance for supporting our project.

Jean-François Dehecq
