3. Reasons

During the first half of 2012, international crude oil prices fluctuated drastically due to a number of factors such as the international geopolitical situation and the European debt crisis. During the first quarter, international crude oil prices soared to a record high for recent years. Recently, the prices have fallen to a record low, following some consolidation in April. After this inflection point, the Company's in-transit and inventory costs of crude oil pushed up the Company's average first half year crude oil processing costs and production costs of intermediate chemicals, semi-products and finished products. This puts the Company's costs in great contrast to the domestic refined oil prices which went down swiftly along with international crude oil prices, as well as to the market prices of petrochemical products, which fell substantially. The Company's refining business incurred a certain degree of policy-related loss, since domestic refined oil prices were not adjusted promptly and adequately in the first quarter, and were quickly adjusted downwards twice in the second quarter, as a result of slumping international crude oil prices. With respect to the Company's chemical product business, the prices of petrochemical products, such as intermediate petrochemical products, synthetic resins and synthetic fibres, fell sharply in the second quarter due to slumping international crude oil prices, remarkable slackened growth in domestic and external demand, a decline in exports, a low level of downstream production activities and destocking by intermediaries, thus resulting in a substantial impact on the Company's business activities in the short term and losses in the Company's chemical product business. Consequently, the Company's losses in the second quarter of 2012 are expected to be significantly higher than those in the first quarter.

Investors are advised to pay attention to the investment risks.
