5. CREDIT RISK REPORT

To generate competitive edges through integrated risk management, for over a year, BANCOLOMBIA has been redefining the focus of its Credit Risk Management System (SARC), not only by aligning it to the recommendations made by the Basilea Committee and the recent requirements of the Superintendency of Banking (SB), but also focused on taking advantage of it as a management tool.

Said process implied the reconstruction of historical data, the creation of information data repositories, and the development of careful test processes and Audits. Additionally, a statistical method was developed to calculate expected losses, including performance models, which allows the Bank today to have an expected loss for different segments and sub-segments (which is not only in the test process to meet the requirements of Phase III of the SARC of the SB but is also beginning to be used by the Bank's commercial processes).

The expected loss method is used, among others, for pricing, aiding the development of a price scheme based on risk. The Bank is also using the expected loss method to analyze business cases and to determine the future profitability of commercial incentives. Likewise, it is one of the pillars on which the added-value measurement system developed by the Bank is built upon.

Finally, the Bank's high management may used the expected loss method to define limits in order to optimize loan portfolio management. Moreover, a follow-up method has been developed to enable monitoring the aforementioned and generate early alerts
